MANITOBA COUNCIL FOR INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

March, 1992

Dear Friends;

The Manitoba Council for International Cooperation and its members are extremely pleased to bring you yet another tool to enhance your work in bringing global education to Manitobans.

Global Perspectives on Environmental, International Development and Sustainable Development Issues: a resource list is a guide to the many valuable resources available from MCIC and its member agencies.

What makes this resource listing different from other sustainable development listings? There are five things.

1. It brings you resources used by international development workers, to show you how our lifestyle impacts on people throughout the world.
2. While it is not an exhaustive listing of resources on the global perspectives of sustainable development, it contains many resources not available from other sources.
3. All of the resources listed are available in Manitoba from Manitoba international development organizations.
4. It provides you with an opportunity to see Manitoba as part of a global sustainable development dynamic.
5. It is designed for a variety of audiences — classroom teachers, students, adult educators working with community groups, academics, and anyone wanting to increase their participation in the dialogue on sustainable development.

Like so many other Manitobans, the international development community promotes a concept of sustainable development that requires us to take global responsibility for our local actions. Our agencies' resources will assist you in making that link.

When you contact our agencies you will find that a number of them have resources on Canadian development issues, especially where a parallel can be drawn between Canadian and international development issues. As well, some agencies have resources which are more specifically addressed to the environmental or conservationist aspect of sustainable development.

The catalogue is designed to be used by students and adult educators or for that matter, anyone else planning to become more informed about sustainable development.

We will be delighted to receive feedback from you about the resources listed within the guide, or to answer any other questions you may have about international development.

Sincerely,

Darlene Henderson
Executive Director

The Manitoba Council for International Cooperation

Who are we?

The Manitoba Council for International Cooperation, Inc. (MCIC) is a coalition of more than 35 church and other voluntary non-governmental organizations (NGOs). It promotes international development through membership involvement in overseas projects and development education in Manitoba.

Why would MCIC develop a resource list on Sustainable Development?

Long before sustainable development became the "buzz" word of the nineties, MCIC and its members were actively practising it, both within their overseas work and by showing Manitobans what sustainable development means to people in developing countries.

In fact, MCIC put the topic on the agenda of many Manitobans in 1988 when it hosted Sustaining the Environment — Transforming the Future: the power, politics, and vision of Sustainable Development. This conference was a forum for more than 200 people with experience in working either with development projects and programs internationally, or with environment groups and other agencies in Canada, and representatives from United Nations agencies, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, and the Manitoba Government. It reflected different ideologies and approaches to development rooted in Western, Native Canadian, and Third World contexts.

More recently, MCIC assisted the YM–YWCA of Winnipeg in hosting another trend-setting conference, Sustainable Cities: New partnerships.

Again and again, non-governmental organizations such as MCIC and its members have been key players in helping to create a context for sustainable development, both at home and internationally.

What is Sustainable Development?

Broadly defined, sustainable development is development which will ensure that the resources used in the present do not deplete those available to future generations; that the quality of life for all is one in which at least basic needs are met and human dignity respected.

The 1987 report of the World Commission on Environment and Development (the Brundtland Commission) identified the goal of "sustainable development" as critical to the world's survival, and called attention to the links between environmental issues and development issues. The Commission stressed that sustainable development cannot be achieved without poverty being alleviated.

It came to the inescapable conclusion that the development policy pursued by any country is a major factor in determining long-term "sustainable development."

Why does MCIC think Sustainable Development is important to Manitobans, and particularly to Manitoba educators?

Now that "sustainable development" is the "buzz" word of the nineties, we feel it is extremely important that Manitoba educators have available an international development perspective which includes the expertise of our counterparts living and working in developing countries.

In addition, we believe that all Manitobans hold broad humanitarian values that find expression in supporting the strengthening of local communities around the world and increasing the self-reliance of those communities. in this era of globalization, it is clear that Manitobans and the people of the Third World live in one world. As "Manitobans making a difference around the world," we encourage you to join us in the exploration of this very exciting topic, sustainable development.

What else do we do?

On behalf of its member agencies, MCIC negotiates and administers the Manitoba Government Matching Grant Program for overseas projects and the Canadian International Development Agency Public Participation Program (CIDA–PPP) funding for Manitoba development education projects. MCIC facilitates and coordinates the development work of its member agencies, assisting agencies to link their development education programming to their overseas project work.

Where Can You Find These Resources?

This catalogue is a listing of resources available on international sustainable development among the 35 member agencies of the Manitoba Council for International Cooperation. The agencies carry out a wide variety of activities. Many, but not all, have books, kits, videos, or other resources available to the public. Some have knowledgeable speakers willing to address classes or other groups. Most resources listed in this catalogue may be borrowed; in other cases researchers are asked to do their work at the agency office. A few items are for sale, and in these cases the prices are listed. All of the member agencies, along with a contact person, address, and telephone number, are listed below.

Manitoba Council for International Cooperation (MCIC)

A variety of books and reports are available at MCIC. You are welcome to browse our bookshelves, but library services are not offered. MCIC staff would appreciate if you would call to make an appointment first. Please contact us at 60 Maryland Street, Winnipeg, R3G 1K7; Tel. 786-2106; FAX 772-7179. Any staff person will be able to make an appointment for you. We do have a number of free resources available for the cost of postage. Please use the evaluation form on page xiii to order.

Principle 10. Global Responsibility

"This principle requires that we think globally when we act locally. Global responsibility requires that we recognize there are no boundaries to our environment, and that there is ecological interdependence among provinces and nations. There is a need to work cooperatively within Canada, and internationally to accelerate the merger of environment and economics in decision making and to develop comprehensive and equitable solutions to problems." - From "Towards a Sustainable Development Strategy for Manitobans," a Manitoba Round Table document

An Invitation from the Editor to Evaluate this Catalogue

Global Perspectives on Environmental, International Development, and Sustainable Development Issues: a resource list is not unique, but it is the first of its kind for the MCIC. I hope you find it easy to use and helpful for your research, teaching, and learning activities.

Every effort was made to include as many titles from the member agency libraries and bookshelves as possible. Others could have been included, had I taken a broader interpretation of the terms of reference. Where choices had to be made, I emphasized materials which I thought would be most valuable to educators and hardest to find — audio-visual resources, materials for elementary school levels, and resources in French.

You can search for materialsr by title with the help of the subject matter index. If you have access to the MINET computer network of the Manitoba Department of Education and Training, you can carry cut a database search for resources.

Every effort was made to create a catalogue that is comprehensive, accurate, and easy to use, but there are sure to be opportunities for improvement that only a user can identify. That's why we developed an evaluation form, to help us serve you better with subsequent editions. Please let us know what you like about the catalogue, either in print form or on-line, and be sure to suggest ways in which we can improve future editions. Send them to MCIC, 60 Maryland St., Winnipeg, R3G 1K7; FAX 772-7179.

"In some parts of the world, particularly since the mid-1950s, growth and development have vastly improved living standards and the quality of life. Many of the products and technologies that have gone into this improvement are raw material- and energy-intensive and entail a substantial amount of pollution. The consequent impact on the environment is greater than ever before in human history." - Our Common Future

"The scale and complexity of our requirements for natural resources have increased greatly with the rising levels of population and production. Nature is bountiful, but it is also fragile and finely balanced. There are thresholds that cannot be crossed without endangering the basic integrity of the system. Today we are close to many of these thresholds."- Our Common Future

"In the past, responsibility for environmental matters has been placed in environmental ministries and institutions that often have had little or no control over destruction caused by agricultural, industrial, urban development, forestry, and transportation policies and practices. Society has failed to give the responsibility for preventing environmental damage to the 'sectoral' ministries and agencies whose policies cause it. Thus our environmental management practices have focused largely upon after-the-fact repair of damage." - Our Common Future
